6. Recommendations

1

Target Informational Keywords with Blog Content

Nike's blog coverage is only 18%. Creating guides like 'How to Clean White Sneakers', 'Best Running Shoes for Beginners', and 'Nike vs Adidas: Which Is Better?' can capture 300,000+ monthly searches currently going to competitors.

2

Dominate Long-tail Keywords

Focus on long-tail keywords with difficulty below 50 and volume above 20,000. These are easier to rank for and convert at a higher rate. Target 'cushioned running shoes women', 'waterproof trail running shoes', and 'gym shoes for flat feet'.

3

Create Comparison and Review Content

Comparison keywords like 'nike vs adidas running shoes' have 27,100 monthly searches and Nike has zero presence. Landing pages or blog posts addressing these queries can redirect high-intent traffic back to Nike.

4

Improve Rankings for Mid-Position Keywords

Keywords where Nike ranks #6–#12 are prime candidates for improvement with on-page optimization (better meta titles, structured content, internal linking). Getting from #8 to #3 can triple the organic traffic.

5

Leverage Paid Ads for High-Competition Keywords

For short-tail keywords with KD 70+ (running shoes for men, basketball shoes), supplement organic efforts with Google Ads to maintain top visibility while SEO builds.

7. Conclusion

This competitor keyword analysis reveals that while Nike holds strong visibility for high-competition head terms, significant opportunities exist in the informational, long-tail, and comparison keyword categories. Competitors like Adidas, Puma, New Balance, Under Armour, and Reebok are capturing millions of monthly organic visitors through content strategies that Nike has not yet fully exploited.

By investing in a targeted content strategy, on-page SEO improvements, and strategic paid campaigns, Nike can significantly increase its organic search market share and further cement its position as the #1 global athletic brand in digital search as well.

Key Takeaway: Nike should prioritize long-tail and informational keyword content to close the gap with competitors and capture an estimated additional 500,000+ monthly organic visitors.
